2. CITATIONS AND EXPLANATIONS

Claims 1-14 lack novelty under PCT Article 33(2) as being anticipated by Gordon et al. (US patent pub 2002/0066101 A1).

Regarding claims 1-7 and 8-14, Gordon teaches a network multimedia system for receiving a plurality of presentations from a communications network, the network comprising a plurality of receiving devices including a primary device and a plurality of remote devices for providing a network guide, i.e., a program guide, and the primary device retrieving information from the plurality of receiving devices and storing the retrieved information for providing with past and present information as well as filtering information or blocking undesired information (Gordon, Figs. 1, 2A, 4-6, and page 2, par. 0028-page 3, par. 0036 for IPG information and interactive program guide system, including a head end primary device as shown in Figure 1 in retrieving information from a plurality of remote devices for later on providing appropriate or requested information to remote devices for past and present information, refer to page 9, par 0100 to par. 0109) and filtering technique is addressed, refer to page 11, par. 0130 to par. 0134 for filtering and customization).

Claims 15-24 meet the criteria set out in PCT Article 33(2)-(3), because the prior art does not teach or fairly suggest a network multimedia system for receiving contents, wherein the system includes a splitter/isolation module for receiving content signals and for providing content signals; and a plurality of receiving devices each coupled to the splitter/isolation module as claimed in claim 15.
